

The Founder

Gerd Bucerius

As a lawyer, politician and as publisher of the weekly newspaper "DIE ZEIT", Gerd Bucerius (1906-1995) defended individual and political rights and freedom, wherever he considered them at risk. His biographer, Lord Ralf Dahrendorf, characterized Gerd Bucerius as a "true liberal, independent and free". In all his endeavours, Gerd Bucerius never once shied away from difficult and sometimes highly contentious questions. Despising complacency, he turned his newspaper into a forum for cosmopolitan debate and controversy.

With its Bucerius Ph.D. Scholarship Program in Migration Studies, the ZEIT-Stiftung Ebelin und Gerd Bucerius strives to live up to his spirit.

The ZEIT-Stiftung Ebelin und Gerd Bucerius

The liberal spirit of Hamburg and Gerd Bucerius' unflinching willingness to embrace the new – it is these two sources of inspiration that define the ZEIT-Stiftung Ebelin und Gerd Bucerius. Its activities are centred on research and scholarship, art and culture as well as education and training.

The flagship of the Foundation is the Bucerius Law School, founded in 2000 as the only private university for law studies in Germany, and already a strong innovative force in its academic discipline and beyond. The establishment of the Bucerius Kunst Forum in the heart of Hamburg underlines the importance of the Foundation in the arts.

Intercultural dialogue and Global Governance are at the centre of the Foundation's international activities spanning above all Central and Eastern Europe, the US, and Israel. (www.zeit-stiftung.de)

For further information please contact:

ZEIT-Stiftung Ebelin und Gerd Bucerius
Dr. Anna Hofmann
Feldbrunnenstraße 56
20148 Hamburg
Germany
Phone: +49 40 41336785
Fax: +49 40 41336700
E-Mail: info@settling-into-motion.de www.settling-into-motion.de

Hamburg, January 2012

The Bucerius Ph.D. Scholarship Program in Migration Studies

Settling ^{Into} Motion

Focus 2012:
Migration in and to the Global South

Scholarship Program in Migration Studies

The world is in motion: people and ideas, products, technologies and diseases are travelling between regions and continents. Cities and cultures as well as family and labour market relations are changing in these processes of globalization. Nation states are less capable to regulate policy areas independently. The movement of people is only one factor among others generating change, but one whose importance will rise over the next years.

Migrants are settling into societies that are themselves transforming. Integration thus becomes a moving target. Everyone needs to be prepared to embrace change. Some migrants will also keep multi-stranded relations with their countries of origin, thereby building transnational spaces; others will after little time move on to third countries. All of them settle into motion.

How can migrants and their receiving and sending countries reap the benefits of this movement of people? Which structural and procedural conditions have to be in place to take advantage of diversity? And what are the challenges for the individual, the migrant family, the regions and countries migrants come from as well as the places of reception? The Bucerius Ph.D. Scholarship Program "Settling Into Motion" seeks to address these questions, each year focusing on a different topic.

Focus 2012: Migration in and to the Global South

For 2012, research applications on "Migration in and to the Global South" are especially welcome.

Both the United Nations Population Division and the World Bank estimate that globally the South-South migration accounts for about 50% of all migration from the South. If irregular migration was included, these estimates would be even higher. The population movements between developing countries and emerging economies usually take place within regions, often between countries with contiguous borders. The differences in income between sending and receiving countries are much smaller than those in case of South-North migration. In addition, the South-South movements are very dynamic – their directions and patterns frequently change and some countries are at the same time both sending and receiving migrants. However, despite its scale and complexity, the South-South migration still remains poorly understood and understudied, largely because of the incomplete and unreliable data.

Ph.D. students dealing with migration processes in and to the Global South are invited to apply for a scholarship. We encourage the following topics, but will also consider other approaches:

- Changing migration patterns in and to the Global South
- Challenges of incoming migration in developing countries
- Reception of immigration in the destination countries: policies and discourses
- Migration and citizenship legislation
- Remittances, their costs and effects
- Migration and social development
- Internal migration, urbanization and social change

Innovative approaches both in terms of subject matter and methodology will be highly encouraged.

The Scholarships

- Monthly stipend of 1.200 Euros, additional funds for special research needs available on an individual basis.
- 6-8 scholarships per year.
- Scholarships are granted for 1 up to 3 years.
- Yearly conferences and field trips.
- Students communicate on a web-based platform and organize workshops supported by a program assistant.

Requirements

- Applicants must be Ph.D. students of – in a broad sense – social sciences.
- Deadline 23 February 2012 for a stipend starting in August 2012.
- Please apply online at www.settling-into-motion.de with Ph.D. proposal and two references.

Advisory Board

Prof. Joaquín Arango (Complutense University, Spain), Prof. Thomas Faist (Bielefeld University, Germany), Prof. David A. Hollinger (University of California Berkeley, USA), Prof. Ayşe Kadioğlu (Sabanci University, Turkey), Christiane Kuptsch (International Labour Organization, Switzerland), Prof. Peggy Levitt (Wellesley College, USA), Prof. John Mollenkopf (City University of New York, USA), Dr. Jens Schneider (Amsterdam Institute for Social Science Research, The Netherlands), Dr. Patrick Simon (Institut National d'Études Démographiques, France), Prof. Michael Werz (Georgetown University and Center for American Progress, USA)

The Bucerius Ph.D. Scholarship Program in Migration Studies

Settling ^{Into} Motion

Focus 2012: Migration in and to the Global South

- Settling Into Motion – The Bucerius Ph.D. Scholarship Program in Migration Studies each year provides six to eight scholarships for Ph.D. students researching migration in changing societies. In 2012, Ph.D. proposals studying “Migration in and to the Global South” are especially welcome.
- The program welcomes applications from exceptionally qualified Ph.D. students in the social sciences with a strong academic record.
- The scholarships for up to 3 years provide a monthly stipend of 1.200 Euros. Additional support for special research needs may be made available.
- The Advisory Board includes: Prof. Joaquín Arango (Complutense University, Spain), Prof. Thomas Faist (Bielefeld University, Germany), Prof. David A. Hollinger (University of California Berkeley, USA), Prof. Ayşe Kadioğlu (Sabanci University, Turkey), Christiane Kuptsch (International Labour Organization, Switzerland), Prof. Peggy Levitt (Wellesley College, USA), Prof. John Mollenkopf (City University of New York, USA), Dr. Jens Schneider (Amsterdam Institute for Social Science Research, The Netherlands), Dr. Patrick Simon (Institut National d’Etudes Démographiques, France), Prof. Michael Werz (Georgetown University and Center for American Progress, USA)
- Deadline for applications: 23 February 2012 for a stipend starting in August 2012. Please find further information as well as the online application forms on the program’s website:
www.settling-into-motion.de info@settling-into-motion.de